Chamber honors area-wide veterans

Even though prizes were awarded at the Bullard Chamber of Commerce's "Walk for a Veteran," on Saturday, the real winner was the organization that benefitted from the event.

"This is what we intended to do," said organizer Dr. John Alexander. "We wanted to not only honor our veterans but show financial support as well."

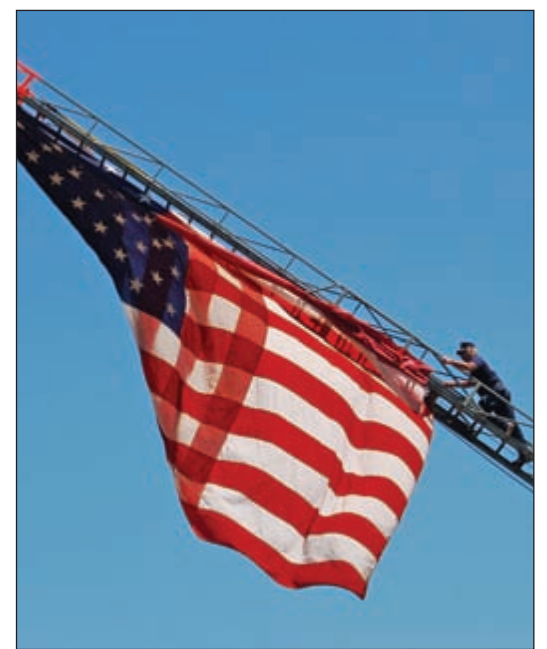

The chamber - at the end of the ceremony - presented a check for $2,850 to The Patriot Guard Riders.

The riders are a group of motorcyclists who have one thing in common besides motorcycles.

According to their Web site, the group "has an unwavering respect for those who risk their very lives for America's freedom and security."

"We don't care what you ride, what your political views are, or whether you're a 'hawk'"

CITY PASSES YOUTH CURFEW

Bullard council swears in members for new terms

At Bullard City Council's meeting on Tuesday, council members unanimously approved an updated city curfew measure for those under 17. The council held two public hearings prior to the ratification of the measure.

"The old ordinance had to be revised and updated," City Manager Larry Morgan said. "This gives us the ability to enforce it while changing times to help youth."

The ordinance states the city curfew prohibits "persons under 17 years of age from being in any public place or business establishment during curfew hours and prohibiting any parent or guardian from permitting or allowing his/her child or ward under 17 from being in any public place or business establishment during curfew hours."

Businesses are also not allowed to let teens remain on the premises during curfew hours - but provide certain exceptions.

Hours are 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. every day except Friday and Saturday - where it's extended to midnight.

The ordinance also states, "the city council has determined that there has been an increase in juvenile criminal activities in ... Bullard."

Bikers roll through town, accept mayor's proclamation

Bullard Mayor A.W. Hines stopped reading the official proclamation at Tuesday's City Council meeting to offer his own experience with motorcycles.

"I used to own a Harely Davidson," Hines said. "And I understand the importance of safety."

Hines said he'd had a few scares with other motorists not paying attention - enough that he got rid of the bike a few years ago.

"I gave it to my son," he said. "But now I worry about him because sometimes people don't notice motorcyclists."

"I admire what you are doing to promote motorcycle safety," he told the group of Tyler Longriders assembled at the meeting.

Hines then signed the proclamation and gave it to the group.

That afternoon an influx of motorcyclists took the down-
